THREATS MADE BY GIBSON; WANTED TO BORROW $3,000, MRS. SZABO TOLD FRIEND

George W. Teichmann Testifies at Coroner's Inquest About Talk With Woman.

KEEPS PART A SECRET.

Attorney for Gibson Says He'll Quit Unless Lawyer Accounts for Szabo Cash.

Sworn testimony of threats made against Mrs. Rosa Menschik Szabo by Lawyer Burton W. Gibson when she refused to loan him part of her $10,000 savings was offered to-day at the inquest into the Austrian woman's death, begun by Coroner Houghton of Jersey City.

George W. Teichmann, a friend and fellow countryman of Mrs. Szabo, told of the threats, but when asked to describe the nature of the threats begged off on the ground that he had not yet sworn to his affidavit for District Attorney Rogers of Orange County.

Toward the conclusion of Teichmann's testimony he spoke of the influence that Gibson seemed to exert over his client. He described it as a hypnotic influence.

"Did she ever remark to you that she was afraid of Gibson?" asked the Coroner.

"Yes, she did," responded the witness.

SEEMED TO FEAR HE WOULD GET HER MONEY.

Q. Did she say what made her frightened?

A. Yes.

Q. What reason did she give for being afraid of him?

A. I understood that she was afraid that he would get her money.

Q. Do you recall what she said to give you this impression?

A. Yes, I recall she told me he wanted to get $3,000 from her at 6 per cent. interest. She refused to let him have it.

Q. And that was the reason he threatened her?

A. Yes.

"What did she say he threatened to do?" asked the Coroner.

The witness hesitated for a minute and then replied: "I am a foreigner and I am confused. I don't think I had better answer that at this time. I think I had better not make any statement on that point until after I have made my affidavits for District Attorney Rogers of Orange county. Mr. Rogers has asked me to cover all this in my affidavits and with your permission I will not answer the question."

Coroner Houghton did not press the matter and the inquest was switched to a different line.

TELLS CORONER OF WRITING TO VIENNA RELATIONS.

Teichmann was the first witness called at the inquest. He related at length his acquaintance and friendship with Mrs. Szabo from the time of her husband's death in 1907 until a few days before she went to her death in Greenwood Lake. He told how he had written to the Vienna Chief of Police to learn the address of Mrs. Szabo's relatives and of the correspondence with them that followed.

Teichmann was followed on the stand by Mrs. Stern, who bought some of Mrs. Szabo's furniture at the time she was planning to return to her family in Austria, and the balance from Lawyer Gibson on July 20-four days after Mrs. Szabo's death.

"When Mr. Gibson came to me on July 20," said Mrs. Stern, "he was very nervous and excited. He told me that I could have the balance of Mrs. Szabo's furniture—all her dresses, her canaries and her parrot, and her cats—for $5. I said to him then: 'How is it that Mrs. Szabo does not want her birds any longer? She told me she would rather part with her life than her beautiful birds.' "Oh, she doesn't want them now," the lawyer said. "She

TAFT COMMITTEE FIRES MOOSERS WHO WON'T RESIGN

Whitney of Jersey, One Who Hesitated, Replaced by Ex-Gov. Murphy.

EAGER TO "GET" AVERY.

For Didn't He Say There Wasn't a Republican Party Left in California?

When the Republican National Committee, representing either in the persons of committeemen or by proxy 41 states, assembled at the top of National Chairman Charles D. Miller's gavel at the Hotel Manhattan today, the task of filling the holes in the membership made by the assaults of the raging, rampaging Bull Moose was the first job tackled. And it was a delicate job, too, for some suspected Bull Moosers on the committee had to be fired outright and others who had already resigned had to be replaced.

When word comes like that from National Committeeman Russ Avery of California, for instance, that "there is no more Republican party in California," one can understand why some of the members of Mr. Taft's committee might be discouraged. But they were not, they declared defiantly.

The first case taken up was that of former Committeeman Walter P. Brown of Ohio. Mr. Brown resigned when he was taxed with being secretly a member of the tided party without waiting to be thrown out. Sherman Granger of Zanesville, O., was selected to take his place.

JERSEY MAN WHO WOULDN'T QUIT IS STEAM-ROLLED.

Then in New Jersey Committeeman Borden D. Whitney, suffering under the same nefarious stigma, refused to resign. The committee voted to put the matter under Mr. Whitney and ex-Gov. Franklin Murphy was seated on the committee as his successor.

The same obstinacy on the part of William S. Edwards of West Virginia, who wouldn't resign just because he was asked to let to action by the committee in easing him off the list. Ex-Senator Nathan H. Scott was the person of tried and true loyalty appointed to succeed Mr. Edwards.

Okla. presented an easier case. C. C. Priestly, one time accredited member from that State of budding ideas, had resigned when he determined that he wanted nothing more to do with the party of the steam roller and all the committee had to do to-day was to name J. A. Harris as the one to succeed him.

Then came North Carolina, whose State Committee had formally declared Richard Pearson to be disloyal to the Q. O. P. Mr. Pearson did not deny the soft impeachment, and he was ousted by swift action this morning. E. C. Duncan was selected to take his place.

EXPECT AVERY'S RESIGNATION, AND THEY WANT IT, TOO.

In the case of Minnesota A. J. Case, well had simplified matters by resigning when he undertook the cause of T. Roosevelt, so all that had to be done was to wire the State Committee to nominate a successor. There did not seem to be an available man on the job and the National Committee wanted to put the matter up to the State organization.

As for that rank insurgent, Russ Avery of California, who had made that remark about there being no Republican party in his golden State, his resignation is said to be on the way to New York now. So the committee decided to await its arrival before appointing a successor.

TRAGEDY AT DAWN IN ACTRESS'S FLAT PUZZLE TO POLICE

Civil Engineer Is Mysteriously Shot in West Fiftieth Street Apartment.

SAYS HE TRIED SUICIDE.

Letter of Introduction Guaranteed Him to Hostess as a "Good Sport."

Much mystery attaches to the shooting early to-day of Jose Couret, fifty-two years old, a Spanish civil engineer, in the flat of Mrs. Jesse Smith on the fourth floor of the Robespierre apartment, No. 220 West Fiftieth street, the scene of one of Capt. Hayes's raids, which led to his dismissal from the Police Department.

Couret, who says his home is in Mexico City, was found bleeding from a bullet wound in the jaw, in the bedroom of Miss Adelaide Burke, an actress, who lodges in the Smith flat. From the moment he was found, Couret asserted he had attempted suicide and he stuck to this version after he had been removed to Flower Hospital. Miss Burke vanished from the scene of the shooting before the arrival of detectives and could not be located. Mrs. Smith admitted, in the West Forty-seventh street station, that she was the Marie Hightower mentioned as the fiancée of George W. Coleman, when, as cashier, he robbed the National City Bank of Cambridge, Mass., of $100,000 in 1910, most of which he lost to a wire-capping gang headed by "Big Bill" Kellner. She declared she had been in another part of the flat when her distinguished-looking guest shot himself.

WOUNDED MAN'S STATEMENTS CONFLICTING.

Mrs. Smith's husband, a dark-skinned young man, who left the Robespierre immediately after the shooting and then returned, was equally ignorant of the circumstances of the shooting. After the Smiths had been questioned they were allowed to leave the police station. The shooting occurred at about 4 A. M. Thomas Riley and James Gardner, the colored lift boys of the apartment house, heard three shots, followed by a commotion above stairs, and they went up in the elevator. At the fourth floor they saw the Smiths in the hallway talking excitedly to Miss Burke. They told the elevator boys a man had attempted suicide in his flat.

When three detectives arrived from the West Forty-seventh street station they found Couret, fully dressed, on the bed in Miss Burke's room. An ambulance surgeon was binding the wound in his jaw. Miss Burke and Mr. Smith had vanished.

The detectives could get nothing from the wounded man, save the curt statement: "I shot myself, tired of life." A little later, he said he was a traveling salesman and that he lived in Chicago. At the hospital, he changed this identification of himself, saying he was a civil engineer, and that his home was in Mexico City. He had come to New York from Chicago, he said. He had met a woman friend of Mrs. Smith in Chicago, who had furnished him with a letter of introduction. Asked about this letter, Mrs. Smith replied it guaranteed the bearer was "a good sport."

VICTIM IS CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

While the surgeon was tending the wound the detectives searched the flat. They found the revolver on the top of a chiffonier near the bed on which Couret lay. There were three expended and two loaded shells in it. Alongside the chiffonier were two bullet holes in the wall. Only one bullet had struck Couret. This had passed through the lip and part of the jaw.

Couret told the detectives he didn't know how the revolver had come to be on the chiffonier. Mrs. Smith said she certainly hadn't put it there. Couret was arrested on a charge of attempted suicide. When he is discharged from the hospital he will be arraigned in the West Side Court.

As George Coleman's trial it was testified that Miss Hightower, who Mrs. Smith admits she was living in the West Forty-first street house where Coleman dropped $50,000 at faro, Coleman told how his residence there was enveloped by wire parties, at which women were present, and big games. Following Coleman's arrest, Miss Hightower repeatedly said she was going to marry him before his trial.

COURT DISMISSES CHARGES AGAINST SHARKEY CHAUFFEUR

Mrs. Sharkey's Cross-Examination Followed by Release of Haskins While Tom Waits.

With Mrs. Tom Sharkey prostrated at home following the testimony which was wrung from her on the witness stand in Harlem Court yesterday, the charges she had made against Richard Haskins, once her pugilist husband's chauffeur, were dismissed.

His Tom came himself to court to represent the prosecution. He sat on the front bench, his body bent alertly forward, his shoulders hunched belittlingly, and glowered at Haskins. For an hour Attorney Aaron J. Levy, representing Haskins, was in conference with the Sharkeys' lawyer, Mr. Scott, and Assistant District Attorney Felix Sharkey and the chauffeur were finally called into the room, and when they emerged the defendant was speedily discharged. Sharkey's face was beet red when he came out into the court room, and his bulky body was quivering with an emotion that almost escaped his control.

On the stand yesterday Mrs. Sharkey, who left Tom's bed and board for eleven days last July, had exhibited even greater emotion. Her story that she had given her $100 diamond brooch to Haskins to pawn, expecting him to return what money he raised for her subsistence while away from her husband, when subjected to Mr. Levy's cross-examination, changed to a statement that Haskins was to have used the money to ward the purchase of an automobile. She admitted that she had seen Haskins during her absence from the Sharkey establishment at Stuyvesant Bay. She became so excited that the blumes on her picture hat waved like palm trees in a sand storm, and Maxistrate Kernochan, taking cognizance of her condition, restored her from the stand.

His Tom today stood just outside the door of the courtroom before Levy and the recent defendant came forth. Haskins turned at Levy's arm and required with him to the District Attorney's room. There they remained for twenty minutes. During this time Sharkey had been growing steadily

DIVES FOR WEE DOG THAT WIGGLES FREE FROM GIRL ON SHIP

Deckhand Saves Tootsie From River and Restores Him to His Wailing Mistress.

Miss Rose Cranley of Boston can go on to Panama in great peace of mind now; her Tootsie was saved from the East River today by a graying deckhand.

It happened this way: Miss Cranley and a party of girl friends who were sailing on the United Fruit steamer Zampa for the tropics were standing on the promenade deck, waving farewell to friends on the dock just as the steamer began to cast off her moorings from the dock.

Somehow or other the Boston miss's King Charles spaniel, who was tucked under one arm, wiggled free in the excitement and he wiggled overboard at the same time.

There was a loud wail from Miss Cranley. Edward Murphy, the deckhand of a steam lighter nearby, heard the cry and saw Tootsie paddling around in the river with just his broad ears and the top of his head showing. He dived in and rescued Tootsie forthwith.

Murphy swam up to one of the lower porches of the Zampa and passed Tootsie through. Then Miss Cranley opened her purse and dropped a $5 bill to Murphy. He ducked his head in acknowledgment and swam to the lighter, richer by his courtesy.

Fluster Taken From East River. The body of a middle-aged man, shabbily clad in a suit which bore on its coat label the date May 16, 1900, was taken from the East River near Pier A today. On the label also was the name N. Tannenbaum, and in the pockets were a watch and a paper bag marked "N. Tannenbaum, Flatbush."

more impatient, and at last, shrugging his shoulders, he walked away, presumably on the first lap of the four-day tow of his saloon at Fourteenth street and Third avenue.

A court attaché came from the District Attorney's room and searched the corridors. Then he returned to Haskins and Levy and said something. Sharkey had disappeared and the chauffeur hurried away.

CUPID'S GONE DAFT! YOUTH OF 29 WEDS MOTHER-IN-LAW, 79

He's Rich and She's Not, She's Fat and He's Not—What's the Answer?

WEEP, NORWALK GIRLS!

Mr. Troiana Has Put One Over on You—This Mother-in-Law's No Joke.

That love not only laughs at locksmiths but spans the gulf of years, cuffs the conventions and makes a mockery of the moss-grown mother-in-law joke has found exemplification once more. Joseph Troiana, who owns a fine residence at No. 32 Wall street, Norwalk, Conn., ran away with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Columba Di Muro, married her at Fort Lee under the elastic matrimonial laws of New Jersey, and the couple have returned from their honeymoon and are as happy as the proverbial clam at high water.

Joseph is in the neighborhood of twenty-nine years, tall, athletic and good looking, rich and possessing a charming personality, which has endeared him to many friends of both sexes. The bride is bordering, it is said, upon the eighty mark, is short, stout and lacking in the physical charms which make business for the scallywag Cupid and produce that exquisite torture, which, for want of better expression, is called love at first sight.

BRIDE IS ONLY ABOUT 80—

WHAT OF THAT?

The first Mrs. Troiana, daughter of the bride, was the victim of an accident which resulted in her death, Dec. 15, 1910. With her husband she was leaving the Metropolitan Opera House when she was struck by a taxicab, in which Mrs. Weel, the Wagnerian soprano, was a passenger. Mrs. Troiana died in the New York Hospital three weeks later.

The married life of Mr. and Mrs. Troiana has been singularly happy. Mrs. Troiana was a beautiful young woman and possessed of mental attractions which vied with her physical charms. Mrs. Di Muro lived with the couple in their Norwalk home, and the mother-in-law bugaboo found no resting place there. After the death of her daughter, Mrs. Di Muro continued to live in the home of her son-in-law. The radiance of the wife's presence was keenly missed by mother and husband, but Mrs. Di Muro, despite her seventy-eight or seventy-nine years, was active in the management of household affairs, and took all the responsibility of the servants and the other economical matters of the shoulders of the sorrowing husband.

GRIEF IN NORWALK! THEY TOLLED THE BELLES!

Mr. Troiana was still considered most eligible by managing mamma. Bright eyes, independent of mamma, were cast in his direction, and it is said he had had his pick among the beauties of Norwalk. But the wealthy young shoe manufacturer had eyes for none of the belles and beauties of the town. Apparently he gave no thought to the marriage state.

Then came the elopement and Norwalk gasped. It was on last Thursday that Mr. Troiana and his octogenarian sweetheart took a trip to Fort Lee. There they repaired to the home of John Troiana, a nephew of the bridegroom-to-be. That night they were married, John and his wife "standing up" with them.

A few days of honeymoon followed on the romantic shores of Fort Lee. From the Palisades they told their little story of love to the river as it lattered over the rocks. They laughed at what the neighbors at Norwalk have to say. And then Mr. and Mrs. Troiana went back to their home. The great mother-in-law problem has been solved in Norwalk.

REITH WANTED TO PAY $10,000 BRIBE JUST TO SLEEP HOME AT NIGHTS

Police Captain on Stand Tells Aldermen's Committee How He Came to Make Affidavit Accusing Ex-Under Sheriff Johnson.

GEN. BINGHAM FOLLOWS CAPTAIN AS A WITNESS.

Commissioner Waldo Produces the Affidavit and Men Named in It Respond to Subpoenas.

Police Capt. John T. Reith was the star witness in the Aldermanic investigation this afternoon. Reith was a frank and voluble witness and took "bribery" and "extortion" in promotions as a matter of course. He admitted he would have paid $10,000 for a captaincy because it was worth it, but explained that the worth lay in the privilege of a captain to sleep nights.

The witness said he never thought Alfred J. Johnson or Thomas Hasset would get the $10,000 he says was asked of him, but it was to go to a "party in between." He refused to say who the "party" might be, but said he had an idea which he had been unable to confirm in five years' investigation. He said he had heard rumors of a "man named Esray or something like that."

Reith volunteered a lot of testimony and was a typical police witness, dodging and evasive at times.

Gen. Bingham was called to the stand when Capt. Reith finished his testimony.

On the witness-stand before the Aldermanic Committee this afternoon Alfred J. Johnson admitted that he talked in 1907 with Police Captain John Reith about promotion and paying for promotion. But Johnson positively denied that he asked Reith for money. Reith, Johnson said, offered to pay money and was told by Johnson he was a fool.

Police Commissioner Waldo resumed the stand at the opening of the proceedings. Mr. Buckner immediately asked for the affidavit of Capt. Reith, the substance of which was first made public yesterday exclusively in The Evening World. Mr. Waldo produced the affidavit, which Mr. Buckner read. Owing to the downpour of rain which preceded the hearing the attendance was light at the opening. But the crowd drifted in rapidly and the room was well filled in a few minutes. With the arrival of Water Commissioner Henry S. Thompson, Alfred J. Johnson and Dan W. Kelleher it appeared that Buckner intended to switch from his general examination of Police Commissioner Waldo to a specific inquiry into the Reith affidavit. Commissioner Thompson, Johnson and Kelleher had been subpoenaed during the morning.

BUCKNER READS AFFIDAVIT MADE BY CAPT. REITH.

The Reith affidavit as read by Mr. Buckner was in substance as follows: "That he was a lieutenant of the Police Department of the city of New York—

"That as a result of a civil service examination his name appeared on the list of those eligible for promotion—

"That during the autumn of 1907 his name was certified to be on the Police Commissioner, Theodore A. Bingham, for promotion to a captaincy—

"That a short time before the promotions were to be made he received word that one Alfred J. Johnson wanted to see him—

"That he thereupon visited the said Johnson at the sheriff's office—

"That Johnson told him he was liable to be promoted to a captaincy—

"That he then went with the said Johnson, at Johnson's request, to call upon one Thomas Hasset, who asked him as to his record in the department, his age and—

"That he later called to see the said Johnson at his home, at Johnson's request, and that Johnson said: 'We have done the best we could for you. It will cost you about $10,000—

"That he did not pay any money to anyone—

"That he was not promoted—

"That his name was passed over
